Sweet Cu- pid, ri- pen her de- sire; thy joy- ful har- vest may be- gin.
 Cold win- ter storms lay stand- ing corn, which once too ripe, will nev- er rise, Then, sweet, let us em- brace and kiss. Shall beau- ty shale up- on the ground,

If age ap- proach a lit- tle nigh- er, 'twil be too late, 'twil be too and lov- ers wish them- selves un- born, when all their joys, when all their
