

5. Dost thou withdraw thy grace?

John Danyel

Dost, dost thou withdraw thy grace, dost, O dost thou withdraw thy grace because I should not love, and think'st thou to remove my affections with thy face? As if that love did hold no part, but where thy beauty lies, and yes, 'tis more, more is desire there where it wounds and pines, as were not in my heart greater than in thy fair eyes. Ah than where it shines!
